

McCue recognises its responsibility in furthering sustainable development through its procurement of materials and delivery of its services. Procurement decisions have a major socio-economic and environmental implication, both locally and globally now and for our future generations. Therefore, the Company strives to incorporate environmental and social considerations into our product and service selection processes.

We recognise that it is our responsibility to encourage our supply chain and contractors to minimise the negative environmental and social impacts associated with the products and services they provide. As a result, the company policy is to:

- Continually investigate alternative goods and materials from a responsible and sustainable source;
- Enhance employee awareness of relevant environmental and social effects of purchases through appropriate training;
- Maintain our Forestry Stewardship Council (FSC) accreditation with a third party audit system
- Provide guidance and support to staff members to allow them to select sustainable products and services;
- Ensure where appropriate suppliers understand the key sustainable issues so that they can tailor their products accordingly;
- Investigate opportunities for the recycling and reuse of materials where appropriate; and,
- Ensure non-discrimination against local and smaller suppliers.

The Company will work to develop clear objectives to minimise the environmental and social effects associated with the products and services purchased and measure and communicate our progress.

The Managing Director has overall responsibility for the implementation of this policy and will ensure that its effectiveness is communicated to all levels within the Company. It is available at request and reviewed annually at Management Review Meetings to ensure its suitability for the company.
